Nature is truly a magnificent gift. There's something incredibly soothing about it that brings immense pleasure, joy, and peace. Capturing its beauty and holding onto those moments refines my skills with each shot.

Vijay and Varun, childhood friends separated by destiny, reunite amidst business struggles and danger. Together, they confront corruption, reclaim their legacy, and restore their bond, blending friendship with resilience.

Story Telling on Business – Between Importer and Exporter

My story looks very different in that you can understand everything. Let's look at these children who are playing cricket with a lot of fun and enjoying the match. On the other side, Vijay is watching the match and feels happy because he believes that watching is more enjoyable than playing. In his family, he is the only one who thinks this way, and his best friend Varun supports him. They are in class 9 at Sarasvati Vidhya Mandir High School in Bengaluru.

However, something unexpected happened on November 15, 2008. Vijay learned that Varun would be moving to Germany because Varun's dad was promoted to general manager at Robert Bosch's main branch there. Although Varun was excited, he was also sad to leave his childhood friend. Vijay felt angry and sad because Varun hadn't shared this news when they met the night before. For him, life without childhood friends would be very hard. Fast forward ten years to November 15, 2019. A large vessel came to Chennai port, operated by MAERSK. It was unloading containers as part of the process for importing. However, while the containers were being transported 50 km away, attackers tried to steal them, as the containers held expensive watches intended for a wealthy businessman in Bengaluru. A person, using drone and GPS technology, arrived at the scene and fought against the attackers. He saved the trucks and reached his showroom named '5 STAR WATCHES'. This person is Vijay Singhania, who has become a successful businessman. During the fight, he misses his childhood friend Varun a lot. His showroom is famous in India, attracting many celebrities because the watches are imported from Germany, made by Royal Wood's Clock Mfg. Ltd, known for high-quality, stylish wooden watches that are silent and cost between Rs. 20,000 and 30,000.

During the Navaratri festival, the Chief Minister visited his showroom, looking to order watches for his family's wedding after Diwali. He ordered about 10,000 to 15,000 watches, totaling Rs. 30 crore, and paid a 50% advance. Vijay worried about fulfilling this large order while knowing the C. M. was watching him closely, threatening him that if he failed to deliver, he would harm Vijay's family and destroy his empire. In desperation, Vijay tried to contact the exporter in Germany but received no response. After a series of unanswered emails, Vijay got a midnight message from the company's CEO saying their collaboration was over. Feeling overwhelmed, Vijay decided to meet the CEO in person. He flew to Germany but found the company had changed, and fell unconscious.

When he woke up, he was in a café owned by an old man who had been there for 50 years. The man asked Vijay what was wrong. Vijay expressed his despair about losing everything: his family, his business, and his friend. The old man assured him that when all doors close, God's door always opens. He then revealed that Varun was the owner of Royal Wood's Clocks Mfg. Ltd. This brought a smile to Vijay's face as he realized they were both unaware of each other's roles in the business world. The café owner gave Vijay Varun's address and urged him to go quickly to save his friend, family, and business. The next morning, Vijay arrived at Varun's house, but instead of being greeted warmly, he faced suspicion. Varun didn't know him and questioned why he was there. Just then, Varun appeared and asked the same questions. This shocked Vijay, causing him to collapse again. When he regained consciousness, Varun was near him. He explained everything to Varun, but Varun was skeptical and did not believe him at first. Vijay showed a photo of their childhood friendship, which finally convinced Varun who then shared his own troubles. Varun explained that his father had been unjustly suspended, leading to their family's downfall.

To address their problems, Vijay suggested they apply their childhood strategies to recover the company and prove Varun's father was innocent. They devised a plan to keep an eye on the owner of the organization responsible for their troubles and began fighting against the gangsters involved. Together, they managed to retrieve the legal documents related to Royal Wood's Clock Mfg. Ltd.

Eventually, the order was completed and shipped to India, where the goods were delivered directly to the C. M. 's farmhouse, where his family was being held by the C. M. 's men. Vijay and Varun saved both their families and Vijay's watch business. In the end, they re-established their business, operating smoothly: one as an importer and the other as an exporter.

This image captures a street scene with cars parked alongside buildings, set against an evening sky adorned with clouds and hints of sunset colors. Just like the sky, our lives too are filled with different shades, each moment reflecting its own unique hue.
